Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, January 24, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

My beloved daughter, yes, I am here by your side, and I am happy to see you reading again the messages from the Venerable. Your collaboration was very beneficial for you, beyond what you can imagine. That episode represented a significant turning point in the long journey of your spiritual development.

We have been shaping your heart for a long time and any means will do, including ordeals, to reach that point. After this re-reading, I can feel that you agree to our speaking about you. M is right: a lecture is livelier when addressed to a student more gifted than the others, and who is the ideal target. All can recognize themselves in that student and, if they are intelligent, be stimulated by this approach.

My son is rushed. He tries to cope with the numerous problems that face him and which he must resolve as best he can. He will manifest himself according to your heart's aspiration. Don't be anxious; he appreciates these fruitful contacts that comfort him intensely. He cannot, out of modesty, express himself as he would like, but be assured these messages hold a very important place in his life.

Spare yourself, my dear daughter, the time and energy you devote to us are repaid to you a hundredfold. Be sure of that.

Babuji