Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, January 31, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

Your distress over this unprecedented earthquake in India is justified. This country is already particularly plagued by poverty and this catastrophe is terrible.

In the West, you live in a certain comfort, and you can't even imagine the sufferings of your brothers and sisters living in other parts of the world. In the absence of effective help, compassion and prayer show that you are not insensitive to the misfortune of others.

An era of upheavals has started on this Earth and nothing will be able to stop it. These changes are needed for the balance of the world. Earthlings play sorcerer's apprentice and endanger the rest of the balance in the planetary organization. They should be moderated in one way or another. The destiny of humanity is at stake, and it is an eternal beginning.

Humans make progress in terms of excess, and even if they are warned of the dangers they pose to the rest of the world, they continue with this sense of excess without paying attention to the cries of alarm that are constantly uttered. The lure of profit leads them to always go further. Thirst for power will ruin them.
