Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, February 6, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

Doubt is human; it is normal and the opposite would be worrying. In such an unconventional situation, how could it be otherwise? Total assurance would be suspect. My dear daughter, we understand your reaction; it is inevitable. You must continue to trust us, if you don't trust your gifts. You're doing your best; we are in such a specific field. Don't let this mail disturb you. We will respond by tackling the problem in small steps and reassuring the sender as well as possible. Continue as you always have. Be in utmost surrender as regards this situation, which seems difficult to you and which, indeed, is not easy to address through this kind of communication. Be confident and don't get involved. What are you risking by doing what we ask you to do, are the protagonists showing signs of dissatisfaction? Do you believe that such a correspondence could take place if there were no satisfaction on either sides?

May your mind be at peace and your heart happy, as they are chosen and appreciated in this subtle and delicate matter.
