Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, February 21, 2001 – 10:30 a.m.

Although he doesn't ask for it, my son hopes we manifest ourselves. Some new projects are going to keep him on his toes – he, the builder who excels in this kind of spiritual enterprise. World affairs, leading to a wider opening up of the Mission, restore his energy. His business sense finds its full flowering in these actions.

By serving, he manifests his love for us. His main concern is to satisfy us.

Can one have a better son? We admire his tenacity and the fact that he can pursue his action simultaneously on both the material and spiritual planes.

We won't elaborate on that any further. We accompany him – he knows it – on his long march. By sowing the best seeds, he leaves behind a great and beautiful harvest in gestation.

Though he may not personally witness the harvesting here below, the result will go beyond his hopes.
