Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, March 1, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

Unity of tone remains among all these messages written over the years, even if they have another density in the current series.

Curious minds will consider their various characteristics and analyse them in detail. That could seem exaggerated to certain readers, but the messages will arouse some interest with beings who have achieved, within themselves, the synthesis between heart and mind, thus unifying their different levels of knowledge.

They will not be trivial for everyone. We have targeted the broadest possible level of comprehension, which does not exclude a certain depth. The example is given with all sacred literature, which was purposely made understandable for all. Finally, simplicity lets in many more truths than it seems at first reading.

Human beings have a profound knowledge, independent of all the acquired knowledge made up of the instruction they have received. This knowledge is one's personal hallmark; in some way, it makes the individual. Diplomas are not to be considered in this personal wealth.

These writings will be received in various ways, according to the level of consciousness of the readers. Each human being is unique: that is the distinctive feature of this world.
