Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, March 4, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

The Earth's history is very ancient and very rich. It has known advanced civilizations. Extraterrestrials, as you call them, came to establish exploration sites and build interplanetary relay stations. Some of them survive, though no longer having their primary usefulness.

The Pyramids are one of them. Many things are said and written about these. They still play an important energetic role. Revelations on this point will give new insight to human beings of today. The time has not yet come. Could they really understand all the subtlety of the system? They should already be admitting to life on the planets of the solar system and beyond. It will take a major blow to get them to accept this principle. A massive invasion will take place; we have already mentioned that possibility, which alone will put an end to the wanderings of science in all its forms.

The whole picture will need revising. Those beings will bring a prodigious knowledge that will leave the poor Earthlings stupefied, with their grand ideas about everything, which are, in large part, wrong or worthless. Those beings will come to protect the universal balance from human schemes and from the enormous risks they take with their so-called progress, alarming in more ways than one.
