Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, March 5, 2001 – 4:00 p.m.

My son is waiting for me to manifest to him. He daren't express it openly. Your heart is available for this service, since it comes to call for mine. The opportunity is therefore to be seized at this unusual time for our contacts. You felt what was taking place between him and myself.

How good it would be to incarnate for a while and go with him to the places he would choose.

Forgetting all constraints, he would show me his achievements. We would be happy, exchanging our impressions. He would captivate me with his lucidity and way of sorting out matters. We could laugh together and philosophize.

I would reassure and encourage him to continue on his way, while telling him my pride at being by his side. I would depart again, leaving him happy and well-motivated to continue.

This cannot be in these conditions, but is achieved in another way.

May these comments, my dear son, go straight to your heart! All the nuances of your feelings are perceptible to me. May they, after this message, be flushed with joy and make you smile. That is what our messenger delivers to you today, on my behalf.

With all the love that binds us.

Babuji