Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, March 10, 2001 – 4:00 p.m.

These prophecies are to be taken as such: a hope for the future. A stronger race, more evolved and respectful of true values. That is what it will consist of. These beings will evolve differently and their objective will no longer be money. That is enough to make some of you dream, those who didn't believe this kind of prospect possible. Humans of future centuries won't resemble today's, either in terms of their body or their mind.

This race, the outcome of an important mutation, will begin its trajectory between two worlds: a long journey at the service of the Great Beings who reign over our solar system, orchestrating the movement of the planets and the harmony that must exist in the cosmos. The supreme power of this vibration governs the worlds – the slightest malfunction brings about chain reactions.

"The infinite", to come back to it, is not a mass without structure, life, or reference points. It is beyond your reach and comprehension.

It is infinite precisely insofar as it is not measurable. This is a truth that doesn't enlighten you at your current stage, but which can reasonably be defined in the future.
