I understand that you're bewildered, but be assured, I don't know everything either. The physical body imposes limitations that we have to resign ourselves to. We're not necessarily aware of all our activities on the different levels. Someone like you, with the gifts that characterize you, must surely understand this phenomenon. So, accept the current situation without asking yourself too many questions and let the concrete events come.

Each of us follows our way, with difficulties specific to it. The day we find ourselves close to greatness will be the most beautiful. Like you, I aspire to that future, far from an exile that is bearable because it serves his cause. My heart can only be truly happy close to him.

What would it mean: To love him without the imperative desire to serve him to the end and please him?

That is what you should be thinking about, my dear sister, rather than obtaining proofs that would reassure you, but that ultimately wouldn't change the present situation very much. Take life as it comes, with what it brings you day by day.

When we are truly ready for a meeting, it will happen, believe me.

The Medium: Forgive my reticence, everything could be so simple, but that's far from the case in the current situation. May the future bring the clarifications that can reassure me, regarding our current exchanges.
