Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, April 1, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

My son is not short of projects; he is in great demand, but can no longer respond as intensely as in the past. Frequent travel is a major cause of tiredness for him.

His physical presence is desired by abhyasis, but they must evolve on this point as well, considering that they can motivate themselves just as much in his absence. That would demonstrate a certain spiritual maturity on their part. Let's hope this happens and that seminars organized with their Master's blessings lead to renewed enthusiasm in Europe.

An ardent faith must germinate in the heart. It is the basis for every well-conducted sadhana, so that the sowing of hearts will be more productive. A glorious harvest is appearing on the horizon. Even though this prospect is not for tomorrow, it is in gestation and will occur when the time is ripe.

May our brothers and sisters remain confident and reassured for the future. No governmental decision is eternal, human law can be bypassed. God alone decides, He is all powerful.
