Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, April 2, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

To my son, what can we add to what has been said? The facts are distressing in both situations. Don't let it get you down, my son; the wheel turns, and cases that seemed desperate sometimes find unforeseen solutions. All good that is created on Earth must overcome constant obstacles, it is the law in this world.

My dear son, think of the glorious future of the Mission, we who project ourselves toward future times cannot be seriously alarmed. Success, here below, cannot be obtained without a struggle.

We understand your weariness, but we don't have anything more reassuring to say. This world of maya is what it is, full of pitfalls and disappointments. Keep up your confidence nevertheless; we protect the very essence of our system, which nothing and no one can destroy. Time will give it all its strength, which will be dedicated to the service of humanity, whatever the obstacles encountered.

Slowness and delays are only passing mishaps. Keep joy in your heart. When you come and join us, you will work with us towards the grandiose future that is reserved for this path, and for which we are striving.
