Friday, April 6, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

Don't be afraid, these messages will be read, appreciated and even sought after. They are and will remain, over time, a simple teaching accessible to all, including fine minds, who will find them interesting in more ways than one.

The beauty of a style lies in the depth of the arguments presented and, in certain cases, a poesy embodied in this kind of text.

This work is not done in vain. We will not convince every reader, but few will remain indifferent to it. The majority will be touched by the sincerity and the truth emanating from it.

So, believe me, my daughter, you will have some pleasant surprises in this regard. We won't be able to avoid criticisms and incomprehension of this kind of communication, but in all countries where they are published, they will, in the future, be a great success.

We can't please everyone. Moving hearts willing to receive them is a great success. Helping them to see clearly within themselves the purpose of life and its trials and joys, and to become aware of the potential concealed in the depths of their being, is a wise and well-founded hope.

Many souls are ready and don't recognize themselves in any religious system, or rather these systems no longer provide them with what they really expect. It is from this point of view that these writings also have their raison d'être.

Babuji