Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, April 18, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

My dear daughter, we must carry on with this activity for some time yet. These messages will not all be read one after the other, hence the need to return often to subjects already addressed, approaching them differently. Some abhyasis will read them on a regular basis and will imbibe them; others will not feel this need and will read them sporadically. No matter, they will have them at their disposal when they feel the need. Hard-hitting events sometimes make one consider the spiritual journey in a different light, with more depth and motivation.

There is in our way everything necessary for one's learning, when this call is strong. Nothing can be forced in this area; only the soul can express this intense need to accelerate its quest towards the Absolute.

All the conditions must be met for this achievement. If our way is agreeable to it, the soul will find the thread that will lead it to the highest level of realization.

In this century, many souls are awakening from a long sleep and their aspiration to be connected to the Divine is immense.

Numerous possibilities are being offered to them, Sahaj Marg being one. This path is simple – this sparseness satisfies our faithful aspirants, and the efficacy of the system is evident for them. May all be blessed!
