Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, November 16, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

There is no difference between the street cleaner and the brilliant academician, only a social veneer differentiates them – upbringing, education and culture. What about the real being, incarnated under one appearance or another? Whoever they are, they have the same limitations. They don't see any further than their human barriers allow.

The only things that can truly distinguish human beings are nature, the evolution of the soul and the spiritual life that animates them.

However brilliant you all may be, reality escapes you. Know how to cultivate values that go far beyond an incarnation: a capital that will follow you and not lose value, regardless of stock exchange quotations and human assessments in general.

You have chosen to follow a spiritual path, thus you have already understood where true wealth lies.

By taking this step, you have set yourselves apart from a good number of people who are up to their necks in materialism. How long will it take them to lift their heads and catch a glimpse of the light. So pray for all your brothers and sisters who are in this situation, and for humanity as a whole.
