Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, November 22, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

Continue, my child, as long as you can. As you say, these contacts are the sun of your life, and we too would miss them. We have become accustomed to this ritual and being able to express ourselves like this brings us joy.

While my son is in Europe, all of you must try your best to interiorize yourselves to better receive and benefit from the fruit of his work. If it isn't possible for you to go and meet him, make sure at least to unite yourselves with him in thought and through the heart. These journeys to come towards you are to be taken as blessings. Make the most of them and be thankful for being able to benefit from them.

The future will not always lend itself to these trips. Know how to appreciate them as is proper and become well aware of their importance.

Very hard times will come and you will no longer have all the facilities currently available. Do not neglect your sadhana to dedicate yourselves to things of no importance. Each day of your life is precious, do not forget it. Lost time cannot be regained, it flees irretrievably.
