End of Basant

Meditate, immerse yourself in light, it is the remedy for all ills. Dive into this ocean of peace and love, there where human constraints and baseness have no access. When you all truly know how to taste this unadulterated joy, you will have found paradise. Make efforts to reach this shore; it is worthwhile.

What more can we say, my child, except to tell you time and again to unite yourselves, to gather together in faith. You all focus on the failings of your brothers and sisters, who are doing the same themselves. You waste your energies in reinforcing the shortcomings of others, when you have your own to deal with. Know that you see in the other what isn't going right in you. Reflect well on this behaviour, you poison your lives by seeing only the negative aspects in your fellow creatures.

Beat your breast, remain in utmost humility with respect to yourselves. It is the starting point of every true and sincere sadhana. You won't be able to really advance without this bad habit being 'eradicated'. Then, the way will be luminous. You will see only the good in the other, and this will rebound on you. You will be able to 'love' truly; love cannot weigh itself down with such burdens. Think of what your lives will become while advancing on this beautiful way. You will make giant steps forward and your hearts will be light, happy.

Watch your words, they can be dangerous. They can also do good. It is an exercise that requires attention in the beginning, but you will be happy with the outcome. The spiritual path is a struggle against oneself, to attain harmony. Your purity of heart must manifest in all your actions.
