Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, October 23, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

There is still a long way to go before order, peace and harmony can prevail on this planet; you all are pathfinders. It is up to you, through your behaviour and your words, to sow the seeds of this wisdom to which the world aspires. See yourselves as bearers of this divine seed.

Cultivate beauty within yourselves so that it is reflected on the outside. Become luminous points that attract your brothers and sisters who are less fortunate than you in this area. For that, there is no need to proselytize. Your attitude, your serenity and your inner strength are enough to impress your fellow human beings who are still searching.

You all belong to a path where you find spiritual blossoming. It is bound to manifest in many circumstances, through reactions made wise by the mastery provided by your sadhana.

Participate with full awareness in the advent of a better world.
