Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, December 18, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

Today's researchers are mistaken in their estimates of the age of the Earth and what its inhabitants were. You will find in this book on Krishna[3] some indications that will confirm this, even if it should not be considered an authentic history in its entirety. The Mahabharata story as recounted in this film is not the pure reflection of reality either. The holy books of all religions also contain some errors. The facts interpreted and told by people are often distorted. They should be taken as a whole without dwelling on details. This history of the past is behind you all. As for you, you build the present and the future; that's what matters. The essential for you is to take part in this great adventure of modern times and do your best so that the world can change on crucial points – violence, lack of compassion of the greatest number, selfishness and unscrupulousness in doing evil. If each of you, our aspirants, tries to change, it will transform the world, and your practice will benefit everyone.

[3] "The modern historians of this earth cannot supply historical evidences of events that occurred before 5,000 years ago, and the anthropologists say that 40,000 years ago Homo sapiens had not appeared on this planet because evolution had not reached that point. But the Vedic histories, such as the Puranas and Mahabharata, relate human histories which extend millions and billions of years into the past." (Krsna, The Supreme Personality of Godhead, by A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada)
