Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, October 29, 2012 – 10:00 a.m.

These are precious moments in life; one has to appreciate them for their true worth. Following a spiritual way is a blessing. The innermost being aspires to this sacred union, thus finding the means to strengthen itself in its quest. A soul in need recognises the way, the one that corresponds to it. Sooner or later, that way presents itself to the experienced seeker and propels him or her where appropriate.

You can judge the effect of these messages by listening to this sincere abhyasi who is committed in her role. Engaging in this manner in the service of a great cause requires strength and courage. Our brothers and sisters remain human beings, with their own personalities, their own ways of seeing life and, above all, of assimilating our teaching in order to pursue their commitment. This is where the best in everyone comes into play; our method aims at what is essential, and it provides for everyone's needs. The differences are numerous; only good intentions matter, when they are followed in a diligent and promising practice. The most committed ones help the others; all find themselves in the same vibration and benefit from it according to their respective capabilities. The key is to be a devoted aspirant, fervent in practice, with a heart offered to the Master who inspires and guides abhyasis on this long and highly constructive journey. There lies the goal; reaching it is the apotheosis. When a soul opens up to this divine reality, the alliance of Masters is in a state of jubilation.

The results are there. This speech is not futile, you can be sure; the divine Splendour is at the end of the road. Blessed are those who catch a glimpse of it and delight in it. They are earning – a little more each day – the privilege of loving at this level; they are so very blessed.
