Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, December 7, 2000 – 8:00 a.m.

Don't let yourselves be trapped by your material worries, even if they are quite real.

Put them back into the context of the realities of this world; they will lose all importance.

Which place will you all give them in one year, ten years? Will they hinder your evolution? Try to give them the appropriate attention without getting caught up in the illusions to which humankind gravitates.

These worries are only stones that clutter your path. Move forward with your head held high, your heart confident while thinking that all things improve with time.

They won't appear so daunting to you anymore, and you'll face them serenely.

Life on Earth is like that: it's a series of worries, failures and tragedies, but also of joys, successes and especially graces that help you come through trying periods.

All of you don't lack support, whether it comes from your brothers and sisters here below or from other worlds where those who love you are not indifferent to your difficulties. They will follow each of you till your dying breath, don't forget that. No matter what happens to you, never lose courage or confidence in your lucky star.
