Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, January 6, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

You will be happy for your brother, we'll do everything possible to help him. Be serene about his departure; may his wife be also. His passage on Earth is a step in his evolution; he has yet a long way to go, and we will move him in the right direction.

That's how it is with reincarnations on Earth. They follow one another, without notable changes, and then there comes a moment when everything moves; the desired level is reached, or grace gives the opportunity to progress in earnest. In both cases, it's an opportunity given to the entity to take a very productive path, and then progress can go very quickly.

Each day of life is a step to take; each day offers the opportunity to surpass oneself. When one's existence is viewed from this angle, trials take on a different meaning. Ensuring that the day's outcome is positive brings a sense of peace. Not everything can be perfect, absolute saintliness is not commonplace, but one single movement of the heart, spontaneous and fully selfless, can beautify the saddest of days. Happy or unhappy, let it be an offering of all of you to the Creator.
