Think of what I told you recently: Send thoughts of love to your Master. He needs that, particularly in this moment. The noble soul of Sulochana already shines in the firmament. It was not easy to live with a being like him. However she performed her role well by supporting him in his so heavy task. Her time on Earth was prolonged as much as possible. Now she must continue on her way at other levels of consciousness. Such is life.

"You also have no time to waste. You know where true values are. It is up to you to take them into account. You should no longer lose your way but move forward on the right road by following your supreme guide. Not everybody can know where he is going and where he specially wants to go. You have that advantage and protection which are necessary to reach your goal while being helped. It is a grace to follow a path already marked out. Be delighted and thankful for being chosen. You will never thank us enough; do not forget it. Our greater joy will be to see all of you arriving at your destination.

"Be blessed!"
