Saturday, November 18, 2000 - 10:30 AM

To you, my dear son,

"You are not alone as you proceed in these turbulences generated by the Mission. They are unavoidable and have their raison d'être, whatever the resulting outcome may be.

"Don't lose courage. The time of rest has not come yet, but you should think of that unique joy that we will experience, to meet again. Hence, you will be able to taste a well-deserved rest before going further in terms of the mission that you have set for yourself.

"Don't forget the grand designs of yours and which the numerous difficulties that you must face on Earth sometimes conceal from you. Your commitment and achievement are sublime; the word is not exaggerated. We can recognize the least of your actions. You always act within reason and with composure. Your personality has multiple facets that permit you to face seemingly insurmountable situations.

"We know your numerous inner resources, which you know how to use so well in all circumstances. Don't give up. There is a solution to any situation, even if it is seemingly dramatic."

Babuji