Wednesday, January 31, 2001 - 10:00 AM

My son should not be disappointed; what must be will be.

"As regards this Fatehgarh matter, we always come back to the same point: humans are complicated, headstrong and stubborn. With them, nothing can ever be simple. To succeed in this project, my son will have to expend strategic strengths and be audacious. Time will iron out difficulties. Everything will take place at the right moment and in the best conditions. To wait will bring about new elements that will allow treating this business in a different way. We will come back to the topic after reading the mail from my son that is meant for us. Let his mind be at rest; he doesn't disappoint us. Unfortunately, we were foreseeing that result. He must not be discouraged; unexpected events will happen and re-launch the project.

"The Mission will not lose anything by this delay, quite the contrary. To deal with business, even those related to spirituality, is neither easy, far from it, nor free from difficulties. Here as elsewhere, nothing can be built without difficulty."

Babuji