A light is rising on the horizon, which represents hope for life at a higher level for future times, far from all sorts of manipulations which human beings are going through. They are advancing without being able in most cases to put things into perspective in terms of what is taught to them. Minds are like sponges which absorb everything they receive, and if they do not have the common sense to get to the bottom of all this mass of information which hits them, that will affect their life.

"How can man find his place here below, without spirituality, a healthy life and balanced environment? Life is hard for him, nothing is simple; he must work so that he and his family, if he has one, can live and eat. How can he face all these difficulties that arise in his life? His fights and struggles of all kinds show how staggering are his efforts and work toward fulfilment.

"Everything has to be earned on this Earth. Which way will he go to reach the goal? It is more his tendencies than his education that will make him act. How will he behave in the face of the ordeals that life holds for him? The innate power that is in him will make him react according to his temperament. May he use that power and have the wisdom to act as an honest man. May the Divine manifest itself in him to guide him throughout his existence and make him realize how he is lucky to possess this privileged enlightenment!"
