Sunday, January 9, 2000 - 10:00 a.m.

You convey exactly what we wish; do not worry about that. Depending on your state, our contacts are more or less easy, but our comments are respected. We will go until the end of this series; everything will go well and then you will be happy to have overcome your scruples. Do you believe that we would continue if these writings did not reflect what we wanted to express?

"We love you, but we will not let you write rubbish. Those who will envy you for being able to do this work cannot imagine how much energy it has required of you and the doubts you had to overcome.

"Even if these messages must remain in a drawer for a long time, they exist, and nothing can change that.

"Your heart was prepared for a long time to receive them. They are an integral part of it, even before being printed on paper; they are imprinted inside you.

"My dear child, we will soon turn the page to read what destiny has written on the next one. There, too, our love will accompany you, and you know it."
