Monday, June 3, 2002 - 10:00 AM

Don't worry, my son supports you, hasn't he always supported you? The time has come to go ahead, as regards those messages. My dear daughter, we have gone a long way together, which will not just end there as we still have things to do. You are a good intermediary between my son and me, why would we not benefit from your gifts? The harvest is good; you can slow down and take stock. You have done a good job; there is enough matter in those messages to feed minds and hearts. They are many and varied; everyone if they would like, will find what is good for them. We have made sure that things were like that.

"My son will actually take the right decisions; these writings will have a special place in the future of our Mission. They will play their role, for they exist for this reason. The time has come now to go ahead and to do what is required for that. Be blessed for having worked for us with love and for so long. The die is cast! Start work, encouragements to all!"

Babuji