We have already come a long way together. All that you wrote under our inspiration is partly made available to my son. He can as of now, make use of them, as he may feel appropriate, as will his successors. All this work has not been done in vain; it will find its justification with time.

"With these messages, we wish to accompany each of our candidates' steps. To some extent they should be a source of inspiration in their daily life: an active memento in terms of helping them in the conduct of their own spiritual life. Through years of practice, it becomes more rigorous and calls for a behaviour suited to the progress realised, which must in theory change the way of approaching the events of life.

"They can be seen in a different light, which does not highlight anymore the same priorities. Our pieces of advice can guide them as the days go by and show them their existence in a different way. That is our wish and the goal of this work."
