Tuesday, March 18, 2003 - 8:00 AM

The fact that my son can receive these messages on a topical basis will make him feel me more present by his side. Although not all of them are personally intended for him, they will become a very strong bond, which perhaps will be able to help him in his heavy task.

"The world is on the eve of burning up because of the stubbornness of certain men of power and of interest stirred up by the hatred which is fuelled between people. Religions should pacify people; instead, they do nothing but exacerbate bad feelings. Weapons of our distant ancestors were gadgets compared with destructive weapons manufactured in secrecy and which can destroy the world. They will end up being turned on the protagonists who developed them. Murderous madness is at its height. No man, no race has the right to destroy any other one, under fallacious pretexts, dissimulating the interest and the will for power.

"Our way falls under the great pacifist movement, which tries to provide men with wisdom, faith in God who lives inside each man—whatever his race, since to Him all men are equal. God resides in everything, in every human being; all are as one and for this reason they should at least respect each other failing to love each other, which is far from being the case.

"Let us pray for this world in distress, thrown into panic by the murderous madness concealed by false pretexts."

Babuji