Your Master has found a choice ambassador in the person of his son to represent him to our abhyasis. He has the required calibre and is easy to get on with. The Mission will need him. Indeed, he is definitely a right spokesman. The work is getting heavier and heavier as our organization is growing, and requires representatives of authority who could measure up. Our brothers and sisters need such visits to motivate them, especially concerning the layout of premises being used for group spiritual practice.[5] All this work requires a lot of commitment and investment of time on the part of all our candidates: is there any better means of serving one's Master! Engaging in this kind of process with love is a demonstration of confidence in our system and of great faith in the future of our way as well as in him who represents it, i.e., their Master.

"Our Mission is being built at all levels. It started as a small core of fervent followers believing in this new kind of practice, which can lead a candidate to a higher level of realization. To this end, it requires his total commitment. Nothing is obtained easily. We are not here in a system of lottery, since each one of them is confronted by choices to be made. Concerning the latter, we cannot do anything for them.

"May more and more hearts always be following us in our wake!"
