Saturday, July 5, 2003 - 10:00 AM

My son is coming to France. It is a blessing for this country. The abhyasis missed him a lot; his visit makes them happy and they express it. People seem to be calming down concerning the turmoil created by such a surprising law for a country of freedom. Common sense always ends up triumphing; it is a question of time.

"There is a demand in many hearts. Their yearning for the Divine is growing. The action of a Master, like my son, can only help this country. With its capital being equipped with an ashram, it will be easier for him to help a great number of souls. This place has been judiciously chosen. It will be productive. Hearts are suffering and need a strong support. The modern world is hustling men, affecting their balance. They have no more suitable reference marks to organize a peaceful life.

"Our way can help them, but they really do not perceive its genuine essence, since they are so much hustled by today's prevailing way of life. They can have recourse to our way. Many find in it what they have long been looking for, even though they may not immediately sense this truth. Grace creates its effect within them, and they thenceforth understand that something is happening. They wonder about it and end up understanding the importance of this work, which they initially felt as insignificant. Westerners' minds are very strong: not everyone is open hearted. Perseverance leads them to an unsuspected road, which they may wish to pursue and discover all its richness."

Babuji