Wednesday, August 13, 2003 - 10:00 AM

Always remember these great souls that come towards you; these are graces which your heart relishes. As our brother has said, service is of primary importance. It guides the lives of all of us here and our action will come to an end only at the end of all things; the assessment of which is not our province, that is if it can take place one day.

"Your Master has got a new life. We admire him, he is a fighter, and his thinking mind increases his efforts, which his body obliges him to reduce. He is continuing on his way, and the impacts of his work go beyond what he can imagine. We surround this blessed son. He is implementing what we designed. He also lives in a completely different world. While rubbing shoulders with many people, he remains, above all, the Master whom we chose. We defer comments on the next steps of his tour; we have ample time to comment on them, when the moment comes. This long tour is hitherto satisfactory; it represents divine forces in action through his spiritual and sacred person. The world, in its diversity, has the same point of comparison: the obvious lack of God. He is far from having the first place, i.e., that which would be appropriate for a spiritually developed humanity. For it, it would be a supreme grace for related tendencies to be completely changed.

"This time will come. It will have to go through an ordeal of fire, many other ordeals, to such an extent that the plagues of Egypt will look like mere inconveniences compared to what will happen."

Babuji