

Tuesday, September 2, 2003 - 10:00 AM

My dear son,

"This long voyage from one continent to another will bring you back to France where you have work left to be done for our Mission. You are acting with the great panache that we know you have, your power of action having constantly developed. You know what we expect from you in this country. May all your projects be achieved. We are looking at you with love. What binds us, my dear son, is beyond words and any human perception. Your physical form hinders you, but it does not limit the work you are accomplishing in any manner. You are our 'hero' of modern times, the great initiator of the Sahaj Marg Mission of the dawning century: that is our vision of things. The assessment of this voyage is already very good, even if the results are not visible to the human eye. Believe well that the spirit of our way is spreading in the hearts, without it being apparent, but in a determining way for the future.

"We are satisfied. What else should we say at this moment? Some projects close to our heart must still materialize in this country. They will result in an additional step in the long progress of our way, wanted and inspired divinely for the good of men of this time and those of the future, for which it will be a great help.

"Our solicitude and our love accompany you, my dear son. We grant you our very special blessings."

Babuji