Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, November 21, 2003 - 10:00 AM

My dear son,

"In any system like ours, shady areas are inevitable. They highlight the beauty of a way like this one. It is part and parcel of the divine plans for the good of present and future humanity. Its light will delight men's hearts. You are the undisputable Master, the defender of the values it represents, and solid foundations that will characterize the future are being established through your constructive action.

"Advance without paying attention to stirs, whatever they may be. Whatever prevails forcefully disturbs nuisances and opportunists. That is how life is on this Earth, as you know. Continue to do what you came into this world for, with your own means, of which extraordinary strength characterizes you: a major feature of builders. You are following the foreseen path perfectly; what more could we add to that! Our choice was judicious; we do underline it once again.

"Follow your way, my blessed son. You still have some work to do. Your wisdom operates successfully in the Mission's undertakings, for which a great life experience is necessary. We can only express our satisfaction to you. The great spiritual ways did not prevail easily; it is necessary to carry on regardless.

"At all times, India was a fertile land where Great Hearts became incarnate. This country is, and will remain, a reference for many human beings, eager for a genuine spiritual process and the right Master. Our way will be that one [process]; they will progress towards more and more simplicity in that respect and Sahaj Marg will meet this expectation.

"A well-deserved rest will come after all turbulences of this incarnation. May your heart remain light and trustful waiting for that [rest], my dear son."
