Whispers from The Brighter World

Channelling, on the level where you practise it, requires complete surrender to divine will. These contacts are your priority and they constitute the best of your daily spiritual food. The fact of keeping the wording of our remarks, without trying to 'embroider' as many would be tempted to do, allows one to recognize the personality of each person taking part in these messages. There is no need for very elaborate sentences; a simple language, similar to the spoken language of everyone, will more easily touch the hearts of our aspirants coming from different backgrounds.

"All the Masters of the past understood it; why would we depart from the rule! The subtle aspects emanating from these messages cannot be identified immediately, and they go well beyond dialectics. My son has recognized in them the mark of our respective personalities, and that is only about the form and the spirit characterizing them. He knows what they actually contain. We are not filling so many pages to just keep repeating the same things. He knows it better than anyone: everything has its raison d'être and that is well beyond human reasoning.

"These exchanges established with him by means not admitted by all men, bear nevertheless their fruits, and we are happy for that. A Master of his level feels alone on Earth, much more than common mortals. He is of a different essence and he feels, very deeply, the negative aspect of this world. His notoriety is growing and for this reason, he becomes more receptive.

"Our love supports him and instils into him great strength to protect him and inspire him with courage to continue on his blessed way in the wake of his Masters. By his side, we will remain until the end. The Mission is everybody's work, under the rule, on Earth, of his high authority."
