Saturday, April 10, 2004 - 9:30 AM

Plunge within yourself where all is beauty, harmony and joy. Isn't this ritual appreciable? It is the rallying point of all our brothers engaged in this redeeming process. They try to find themselves, not knowing at the beginning where this process will lead them.

"It does not open the doors immediately; efforts are to be made, steadfastness in the abhyas, and a sincere call of the heart, in compliance with what we propose to it. When the pace is found, in complete harmony with the Master, the progression continues. The principle is simple: openness of the heart, sincerity and perseverance in practice and surrender bring an abhyasi towards the blessed shores. This process takes place smoothly; the being is being transformed imperceptibly, not always assessing the progress made by him.

"Our aspirants know all this; nothing is palpable in this kind of process. Their inner self knows it; the transformation is not visible, but it is effective. The heart can finally sail freely; it advances in a good direction. This certainty is soothing and constructive. It knows that time is the decisive element in this business. It must go through stages, grow, and haul itself up to the heights, by jettisoning the useless aspects. It knows the rules. The divine laws are strict, and nobody can circumvent them. The divine power can be felt, it attracts it; does all the rest matter? It must be put into perspective and the main thing should certainly not be neglected.

"By the grace of God and the Master being its intermediary, this soul progresses towards the final goal of these many incarnations decisive for its realization.

"Fusion is the ultimate stage, the final achievement and the apotheosis of any process."

Babuji