Sunday, April 25, 2004 - 10:00 AM

Subtle bonds linking hearts come sometimes from afar in time and are brought to the day when they take place within the framework of the divine plans justifying their encounter to better serve them. Once again, there too these concepts are beyond human control. It is enough that they are intrigued by their current incarnation if they actually wanted to look further into its meaning, in terms of its implications in this world and beyond. The real concern should be for them to make a success of it at all levels, not neglecting any aspect of the underlying reasons. Many do not wonder about the profound meaning of life, as they are too preoccupied by material worries, sometimes justified, often superficial and relating to futilities. Our brothers are supposed to have gone past this step and to have engaged in an approach to the Divine, allowing them to raise the veil, having so far blurred their judgment on reality.

"Will they more easily manage to put into perspective that which in the long run has no real interest? While getting wiser, their view of things should widen and make them more serene, in many situations of life, in the face of ordeals each one of them cannot avoid.

"Meeting again from life to life has its raison d'être. Some families of souls remain united and have to combine their efforts to serve the same cause. With that prospect, many of these souls meet within the framework of our Mission where they must act in one way or another. The roles are assigned according to personal abilities and necessities.

"It is all connected, only the targeted objective is important. Each one faces egotistic reactions, which he should control, thus making the victory of all more important.

"Humility remains—this has to be underlined—the real richness of great people; my son illustrates this matter perfectly."

Babuji