Tuesday, August 24, 2004 - 10:00 AM

My daughter,

"Your mistakes, as you call them, do not endanger the expansion of your soul. Once you have deserted your physical body, it will carry on its evolutionary cycle, leaving far behind it the vagaries of this incarnation. Be happy of living the present experience; it is a rare opportunity in life, and serving that way is gratifying. Be listening and receptive to all that we are expecting of you. We brought you to this point where your perceptions are remarkable. Your heart is like an open book where each day a new page is being inserted, full of these lines revealing our contact.

"How will these remarks be perceived by our brothers? Their rejecting them would be tantamount to narrow-mindedness, which would slow down their progress. They should then take a new look at themselves and think well about such an attitude.

"We haven't got that far yet; let us carry on in the same direction. Many will appreciate these manifestations of the spirit meant to help them. What takes place in these writings lies well beyond expression. All will have to understand it and interiorize themselves by reading them to grasp the fruit of it. Our way offers a broad range of possibilities: not all of them are correctly exploited by our aspirants. Caught in the movement of modern life, they neglect some aspects of it.

"They have a high level Master. This point is critical, and it is up to them to invest themselves sufficiently to deserve him. Each one is left to his own choices of life; we cannot interfere in what does not foster a true spiritual process. Practice will end up doing its work and sufficiently encouraging the less motivated to progress. A soul, sooner or later, wakes up and manifests itself as is proper, to focus on the main things. All our brothers are united in a circle of hearts labelled with the divine hallmark."

Babuji