My dear daughter,

"We would like now to start giving you messages having a totally different content. Scientists are very often mistaken in their assertions. In a century these assertions will be outdated. Man will have taken a step forward in his understanding of the laws governing the Universe. They will then become obvious to a great number of minds capable of understanding their real meaning.

"Significant changes will take place on the Earth globe after great upheavals have occurred. Even the best established structures will be disrupted, and the elements will make life difficult for human beings, who will have to face up to things. Another race stronger and having a much more developed sense of extrasensory perception will set up a world that would astonish most men living in the present.

"When the poles are reversed, they will generate great climatic changes. Men will need to adjust themselves. A large part of the population in its present proportions will have disappeared. The Earth will start a new era, best suited to its evolution. We will further elaborate on some of the mentioned topics, and you will have to note down, without wondering too much, even though you cannot verify the soundness of what you are writing. These predictions should neither worry nor embarrass you. They do not relate to the present day, and a long time will have passed before all our assertions come true. You will need to trust in us, and leave your usual doubts aside. These writings will long remain in oblivion, before they could be made public. Therefore if it suits you to consider them as fiction, we have no objection to that. Don't worry you are not under the influence of any devious spirit.

"We will resume tomorrow the normal course of our talks. Be at peace. Be blessed."
