Tuesday, March 6, 2001 - 10:00 AM

My dear daughter, let us focus on what is feasible. The current system is working rather well except for a few delays due to the congestion of the telephone lines. We must appreciate the easiness we have arrived at. The working team is efficient. If we consider the present capabilities of information technology, why couldn't we also have our own means of communication?

"In centuries to come, scepticism on that point will not exist any more as these means will be widely used on the Earth. Mankind will make great progress in knowledge, and in the perception of vibratory waves surrounding this planet. It will be less populated than it is now. Another race of individuals will live in these places, beings more advanced and receptive to the reality of the 'beyond.'

"This planet will be used as a relay station among the sidereal and planetary spaces. A leading-edge technology, not destructive for mankind, will facilitate that service. Telepathy and the many resources of the brain will be very much used for everyone's good.

"That is something reassuring, which raises hopes for the descendants of today's men who are moving forward in this world of darkness and despair."

Babuji