Sunday, October 29, 2000 - 10:00 AM

It is unusual that we tackle topics like that. We care about your own good in general, and about the food that you give to your physical body, which has an impact on the other bodies. You cannot escape that. It is the reason why we suggest you a vegetarian rather than a meat-based diet.

"Indians are not great lovers of the latter diet, in part for economic but also for religious reasons. Their way of life is peculiar to the culture of your country. The ancestral customs have been perpetuated until today; they will evolve in a distant future, after a lot of upheavals that will lead to a change in the climate. Peoples' diet is largely correlated with this element.

"The Earth is moving towards profound transformations, and populations should adjust to them as time goes by. There won't be other means to face up to things. As we often said, this planet is subjected to a system of evolution and regression that creates permanent changes."

Babuji