

Tuesday, November 21, 2000 - 8:30 AM

You are right to call for love; it embellishes everything, and it sanctifies everything. One has only to desire it strongly and he will be as one with it, and forget the ugly side of life. You should imagine that it, the ugly side, does not exist anymore, that the purity is everywhere in this world, that men understand each other and support each other, that everything is beautiful and that life is a long ode to the Divine—a love song that covers everything.

"So, that is a dream would you say? Yes, it is necessary to dream of this world, so that one day it will exist, as we describe it and as you may wish it to be. Such worlds already exist in the universe, so why should that not happen on Earth!

"Work so that your thoughts make it materialize and your acts build it. Make sure that your heart distils a nectar which nourishes creatures that surround you, being yourself in a perpetual state of grace.

"No, it is not utopian; such an idyllic world could be built. Do better, work toward its construction."

Babuji