Saturday, April 5, 2003 - 10:00 AM

What else can be said about man, who despite his smallness lives in the most complete illusion, believing he is the biggest, the only one endowed with intelligence, not only on this planet, but in the entire universe? To him, there is no doubt as to his superiority; he devises plans and claims unambiguously that he knows, and that he is sure of what he puts forward! He sets up systems whose impacts are destroying this planet slowly but surely. How could this dangerous escalation be stopped? How could it be slowed down in this frantic race, which is leading the world towards an unprecedented tragedy? These remarks are not cheerful but they are the reflection of a sad truth, which so far man is not really aware of.

"The inevitable will take place. Nothing will prevent it, for the fundamental laws concerning the balance of the elements are being ridiculed since too a long time. How can those responsible for leading the world to its downfall be made to see reason? They only see profit and domination of the weakest ones with the help of an economic power defying the most elementary rules, instead of respecting the planet which carries them and which enables them to live. They will pay dearly for those excesses, and all men will undergo the consequences of their leaders' stupidity. The escalation is at its height. Only divine power will be able to stop it in its own way which will not be to men's liking."

Babuji