Saturday, September 11, 2004 - 10:00 AM

Important climatic changes will generate unprecedented transformations in the history of this planet. Humanity is living dangerously, without taking account of the warnings being given to it. A real awareness would be necessary there too, but men are caught in frantic consumption behaviours and ignore any warning on this issue.

"Everything in the current civilization is contributing to its loss. The cries of alarm of the experts not having been heard while there was time, the unavoidable will occur. Respect for nature and life in all its forms is a concept ignored by man since too long a time. He will have to undergo the relevant consequences. The divine laws are inflexible: they operate on their own, there too.

"Our goal is not to make humans see reason in this matter; they are not ready to change their habits. Only absolute necessity will do it, in a not very rejoicing context which all will suffer from. Our action lies elsewhere—the spiritual life of the beings is not restricted to an incarnation in this world. Guiding them through this one is our priority; on this it is not too late to act. The prospects for success are encouraging.

"Our way is like a river making its own bed and refreshing the banks; it will go on widening thanks to a ceaseless provision of water. A soul makes light of the matter, it has its own life; no seismic upheaval can affect it. Its refuge, the creative divine energy, gives it its real identity, its letters of nobility.

"We are working to that end: to lead souls to the quintessence, to the immersion in the ineffable splendour, to the heart of Divinity."

Babuji