Thursday, November 4, 2004 - 10:00 AM

On some occasions, one must dare to take a step ahead when the time comes. From time immemorial things were like that: the pioneers had the courage to confront public opinion, otherwise the world would be still defending absurd ideas such as 'the Earth cannot be round.' This is only one example among so many others. Open-mindedness on issues relating to esotericism was not on a par with that on high technology that revolutionized the world for obvious reasons.

"Everything happens in due time. The real change will come from facts beyond this world as it stands today, leading men to review their position completely. They won't have any other option. Caught in an ascending movement, the transformation will take place in spite of them, without any exception. What will then represent these writings, unusual to many human beings currently, in the great turmoil that will disrupt drastically humanity in its habits of life?

"They will need to actually try to understand and open up to the realities of their stay on Earth, which is a step in a long process capable of providing them with a higher life, centred on the divine forces, of which so far many were ignoring the existence. More and more, voices will rise, that are likely to sensitize them on this eternal truth which no human being will be able to deny any more."

Babuji