

Monday, November 15, 2004 - 10:00 AM

Life gives and it takes back; it is in the nature of things. This emptiness, deeply felt, offers the opportunity to develop differently. Examine your life and you will see that these changes can bring positive aspects.

"Life is movement, without which it would stagnate and bring all the evolutionary system to a standstill. In each situation, it is necessary to see the positive side, not visible from the onset. Life is a university, the richest, and the only one, which truly shapes a human being, by allowing the karmic effects to appear.

"Change is necessary to evolution; everything evolves around these principles and can be fully justified by one who observes, as is the case with a wise man. Many began a true spiritual process following an outstanding event in their Earthly life. The ways of God generally escape human sagacity, as men are limited in their perception of a higher reality.

"An incarnation represents only a small part in the big puzzle, which ultimately is the long process of a being towards its highest destiny. The concept of surrender emerges here in all its power; it is not easy for our brothers to always give it the first place and yet without it, the way becomes complicated. Confidence and surrender are necessary, we said it, and without these two aspects our action is weakened.

"May love conquer the heart of all our aspirants; it is the light on the path and it leads naturally to the adequate state of mind."

Babuji