Wednesday, November 17, 2004 - 10:00 AM

Guided by prayer, your heart has succeeded in finding the way to plenitude. The door of the sanctuary was opened and there, beyond any expression, all the fervour it is capable of could be expressed. This song of love is inimitable and yet, that of the great mystics of the past succeeded in touching many hearts, which in turn carry the torch. This holy flame will not die out; quite to the contrary, it is growing in spite of appearances, in the darkness of this world centred on materialism. At all times, writings of this kind contributed to waking up the souls thirsting for the Divine. They are not inspired in vain and their contents do not follow current fashions.

"The heart is sensitive to what corresponds to it and touches it in the depth of its fibres, i.e., vibrationally; the intellect in this matter remaining in the background. In the spiritual poverty of this world in general, a refined being seeks his way and if he succeeds, grace abounds in this thirsting heart, seeking a direction to his liking.

"Many are those who reach this crossroads and must make a choice, by seizing an opportunity that may not arise again. In the evolutionary cycles of this planet, things are like that: they are renewed according to rules laid down, immutable and inescapable.

"May our remarks touch hearts in their subtle aspects and help them take the decisive step making it possible to find their true nature, related to the initial purity: that which can propel them towards the Ineffable splendour."

Babuji