Thursday, November 11, 1999 - 7:00 AM

My dear husband,

"This sudden separation is very hard for you. I did not tell you sufficiently how much I loved you. Our characters clashed, as our personalities were so different, and yet similar in some respects. By your side I had the possibility to experience a very beautiful life. Your way towards the state that you have reached, the implied work and abnegation as the head of a family, is admirable. It is a very great grace for me to have lived all that by your side.

"I made, with our Beloved and you, a considerable work on myself, which brings me today at the feet of His Highness. Rejoining Him is an unparalleled joy. We did not even suspect how great He is. We should only kneel before Him, pray and thank God for coming close to such a being.

"I would like to thank you for your patience towards me, that disease, my character and all the concern that they gave you. The day will come when we will meet again close to Him, and that will be great happiness to be together in His divine and unique presence."

Sulochana