Sunday, June 11, 2000 - 10:00 AM

My son is more surrounded than you. In spite of that, he is alone and tired. The load is heavy and the human being sometimes suffers from not being able to handle everything, to further endeavour so that the Mission can expand and structure itself more quickly. Your heart is moved by his tiredness because you do experience it well for other reasons. All your good thoughts will necessarily touch him.

"It is true that a lot of influential thinkers of your time, considered as such by 'the elite,' were and are on the wrong track. They impress false concepts on the minds of many individuals. Their own reasoning will maybe bring them back to reality. Humans need points of reference; they follow in footsteps that don't necessarily lead them where they must go.

"One day, matured by their own experiences, they discover their misjudgements and stop at the crossroads, in search of a solution more suitable to their state of mind. It is sometimes necessary to go a very long way to understand the real aspiration of that, that is called the soul, and then everything is to be done or redone."

Babuji