Saturday, March 10, 2001 - 8:00 AM

Loving is your vocation, don't look for anything else. You should be satisfied with providing that which the world misses the most. You are not the type who makes grand gestures for all to see. You have your own place, an important one, which doesn't require what you are lacking, i.e., the possibility of acting physically, humanly, in the field.

"Serving means doing what one came for, whatever the direction chosen. Be delighted, my daughter, you know your place. Your life has reached its full blossoming. Keep on thanking as you constantly do by referring to the Guru of Gurus. He does not weary of hearing you. All the love He receives from beings populating this world and who turn to Him beseeching Him and offering their service counterbalances the blackness of the world.

"This balance is important. It helps the world in its evolution. Love attracts love, may it always grow and transform humanity. This Mission is imposing. You should contribute to it. The issue is not taboo, as some people believe even within our own Mission. A human being does not advance in isolation; he takes his fellow creature with him.

"Make sure that this curve constantly evolves in the right direction and stretches towards infinity."

Babuji